Alan Murphy Photography workshops focus on understanding bird behavior as well as selecting suitable and artistic perches for the best photographic results you can envision. During the workshop you will have access to photographing exquisite bird species, but beyond that you will take away knowledge on:

- How to scout for bird photography opportunities
- How to set up for photographs
- How to select proper perches for the species and set them up so birds will land on them
- How to attract birds to your setup

The workshop has an exceptionally limited number of participants in order to provide thorough and individualized attention to each photographer.

Participants must have a thorough working knowledge of their own photographic equipment. Note that other than incidental or informal comments, no instruction will be provided regarding the use of equipment or proper settings.

Participants are expected to respect schedules and be present at the meeting times that have been set. Photographers who are tardy affect everyone's schedule; the workshop will proceed as scheduled and will not be held up. Cellular phone numbers should be communicated before the first day of the workshop to ensure the best communications possible.

There is no smoking during the workshop and cell phones must be off during shooting. So that everyone may reap the full benefits of this workshop, requests may be made regarding limiting other noise and movements. These requests will not be unreasonable and are standard for serious bird photography. Please discuss any concerns at the time

If you have any special needs with regard to food/diet, accessibility, allergies, or other considerations, please communicate those to Alan Murphy Photography with your registration.

I have read and agree to the above terms.
